RAILROAD MATTERS.

History of the New Line from Memphis to Louisville.

Courier-Journal, 14th.

The completion of the Chesapeake & Ohio road to Memphis, yesterday, is an event of more than ordinary interest. Some years ago a plan was formed to build a road from Elizabethtown to Paducah, receiving the active as spoken of, but not in assistance of the Louisville & Nashville Company. After some time the Louisville & Nashville abandoned that framed and carefully preserved in the line, and instead secured a line to Memphis.

The business of the Louisville & Nashville road during the years 1865-66-67 reached such large proportions much delay in transportation occurred, and Louisville became clamorous for another Southern outlet, the project to build the Elizabethtown & Paducah was revived, and the city subscribed a million of dollars to the stock of the company. But Elizabethtown is some distance from Louisville, and the only access was by the Louisville & Nashville. This was not satisfactory, and it was determined to build an independent line into Louisville. To this scheme the city again, in 1873, made a sub-scription of $1,000,000. At the same time work was progressing on the Memphis & Paducah line, and the understanding was that Memphis & Louisville would meet at Paducah.

The road from Louisville to Paducah was completed, but the panic of 1873 proved disastrous to the enterprise. Money to stock and equip the road in a manner to enable it to do a profitable business was not forthcom ing, and in a few years the road was sold to satisfy the mortgage bond-holders, and Louisville's $2,000,000 disappeared. The road was sold in two separate sections: First that from Louisville to Cecilia, the short portion, and then that running from Elizabethtown to Paducah. The Louisville and Nashville company, fortunately for the city of Louisville, made the mistake of buying the Cecilia branch instead of buying the line to Paducah. Any one securing control of the E & P. could force the L. & N. to part with terms, or at no very great expense parallel it into Louisville.

Before completing the road from Paducah to Memphis the company was bankrupt and passed through many vicissitudes.

As Mr. Huntington pushed forward his Chesapeake & Ohio, he began to look to the South and the West for other lines. He purchased from the bondholders, at a low price, the road running from Elizabethtown to Paducah, and he also, after some difficulty, obtained possession of the uncompleted roads running south from Paduesh and north from Memphis, with a missment. At 11 o'clock Louisville & who would esteem the honor more highly than the Captain.

The Family Tree All Right as Far as Heard From.

The Dresden (Tenn.) Vidette says Davy Crockett was once a resident of Weakley county, where he was married. The following is the exact wording of his marriage license, taken wording of his marriage license, taken from the record: "Davy Crockett, with Thomas Dogett security, binds himself in a bond of twelve hundred and fifty dollars to Governor John Sevier, August 1st, 1806, to marry Polly Finlay."

Our readers will please pardon us for thus, publicly congratulating ourself, upon this presumptive evidence that our grandsire was actually married. Not that the evidence is as full as we could desire, for the reader will as we could desire, for the reader will perceive that Dayy "binds himself in a bond of $1250 to Governor Sevier to marry Polly Finlay" it is no where mentioned that the bond was not forfeited. "Twelve hundred and fifty dollars" is an amount that would hold most men up to the matrimonial "fodder-rack" and as we've never missed that amount from the estate we are proud to believe that "Davy" came to the "scratch" like a man. It is a question scratch like a man. It is a question that has long worried us. We could never find the man, preacher or 'squire who "jined 'em," and our own father, eldest son of Davy, always said that he didn't know of his own personal knowledge that the old folks were married, but he believed it sincerely, He said he might have been present at the wedding, but if so he was too young to remember much about it. Just why Governor Sevier should have had the bond executed in his own favor is not apparent, unless he was our "gran-mam's" "gardeen." Well, it's a great relief, and we are proud to know our grandsire could give a bond of $1250—an amount that, if required of his degenerate grandson, would make us fly up behind, like a sparrowhawk in summer time. Once again are we called upon to bless the enterprise of the American press.-[De Witt (Ark) Gleaner, 12th. The Finley family lived about six or seven miles southeast Dandridge, at a place still known to old citizens as Finlay's Gap. After Davy Crockett's marriage he lived near the Gap several years, and the site where his cabin stood is yet pointed out on the "big road" between Mossy Creek and the mouth of Chucky.
